THANKS

Representative JAMES T. WALSH
of New York's 25th Congressional District for your support of the National Science Foundation.

NSF invests in science and research for tomorrow's discoveries.

Last year, NSF awarded over $262 million for 1506 projects in the state of New York. These projects include:

- research on ecosystem mechanisms
- work on restructure of the science and mathematics curriculum and instruction for future elementary school teachers
- research on communication methods for data and image transmission
- work on fabrication of nanostructures
- learning more about deterioration of suspension bridge wires

NSF Science and Technology Centers in New York:

*Center for High Pressure Research, at SUNY-Stony Brook

*Center for Photo-induced Charge Transfer at the University of Rochester

New York also has four NSF Materials Science and Engineering Centers.
